⚠ WARNING – Real safety rules

- CHOKING HAZARD – Small parts. Not for children under 3 yrs. Adult supervision recommended.
- Even though PETG is safe, never put any part in your mouth.
- If a child swallows a part, get medical help right away. If a pet swallows a part, seek immediate veterinary attention.
- Fly outdoors only, in a large open space away from power lines, trees and roads.
- Not for indoor use – rotors leave the launcher at high speed and can break against walls and ceilings.
- Never launch toward faces, people or animals. Keep your face clear of the rotor at launch.
- Do not try to catch a spinning rotor.
- Inspect rotors before each flight; replace any that are cracked or bent.
- Never climb trees, ladders or roofs, or run into a street, to retrieve a rotor – ask an adult.
- Don't fly in high wind, bad weather or low light (glow rotors excepted, in a safe open space).

Possible side effects

Not medical advice. Very much TwistFlyer advice. (These ones are for fun.)

More time outdoors
Sudden urges to go outside. Then stay outside.

Time off devices
Screens left unattended. Notifications unread. This is normal.

Adults hiding a second set
That's what the Family Set is for.

Indoor use breaks rotors
Ceilings, lamps, fans and Grandma's vase do not get along with rotors.

Rotors in trees & gutters
And new friends among the neighbors who hand them back.

Mild neck strain
From looking straight up and saying “did you see that?”

Spontaneous competitions
“Who can go highest” contests. Bragging may follow.

Later bedtimes
Glow rotors are linked to “just one more flight.”

Dogs with opinions
A falling rotor is a personal invitation. Keep pets clear.

Turn over for the terms of use, release and indemnification.
